European Mobility Week

When is European Mobility Week?

European Mobility Week takes place every year from 16 to 22 September. The 22 September represents the highlight of the Week as participants organise "In Town Without My Car" day.

Who can participate?

All cities, towns or local authorities are encouraged to participate in European Mobility Week, once they submit a national or European charter.

What are the criteria for participation?

Participants commit themselves to organising an entire week of activities, taking the focal theme into account. They are also required to implement at least one new practical measure that is made permanent and contributes to modal transfer from the private car to sustainable modes of transport. The 'In Town Without My Car' day is also compulsory and should preferably take place on 22 September.

Why should I organise a Mobility Week?

European Mobility Week is an opportunity to initiate a wide range of activities and represents a platform for local authorities, as well as organisations and associations to:

- Promote existing policies, initiatives and best practices related to sustainable urban mobility
- Establish functional partnerships with local stakeholders
- Launch new longer term policies and permanent measures
- Test traffic measures and consult with citizens
- Raise awareness among citizens about growing concerns such as air quality, road safety or climate change
